

Good clean fun

Safety comes first at the beach this summer, as these water babies know all too well. Little Nippers Indi, 10, Matthew, 11, and Max, 9, made a splash as Water Safety Week kicked off over the weekend. Port Phillip mayor Rachel Powning said Water Safety Week, which started on November 26 and finishes on December 4, is a timely reminder that glass and smoking are no longer permitted on Port Phillip beaches. "Cigarettes and glass litter our beaches and pose serious threats to people, marine wildlife and our environment," she says. "Glass-free means cut-free, and no butts means people can enjoy unpolluted water for swimming."
